PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

SINCE the previous edition of this book appeared the criticism of Havelok has been greatly advanced by the work of Heyman and Deutschbein on the story, by Holthausen's second edition, and Professor Skeat's discovery of the Cambridge Fragments. In the few weeks available for the task of revision I have used this new material freely, and have made considerable alterations the more willingly because Professor Skeat himself was always most ready to utilize the latest results.

The Introduction has therefore been remodelled. The Text and foot-notes are from stereotyped plates, and such slight changes as have been made have the single aim of restoring defensible readings in the manuscript. The Notes are for the most part new; and the Glossary, which was admirably full and accurate in its references, has been revised throughout.

This work, necessarily hasty, would not have been possible without generous help. The Misses Skeat have kindly placed at my disposal the materials in their possession. Professor Carleton Brown collated the Cambridge Fragments, which now follow the text, with very valuable results. Dr. Craigie contributes the important emendation of l. 64. Professor Napier has allowed me to consult his bibliographical collections, and to quote his explanation of the forms mentioned in the note to l. 2143. Finally, in all points the revision has greatly benefited by Dr. Henry Bradley's criticism and advice.

INTRODUCTION

§ 1. THE English version of the Lay of Havelok is one of the few poems that have happily been recovered, after having long been given up as lost. Tyrwhitt, in his Essay on the Language and Versification of Chaucer, has a footnote (no. 51) deploring the loss of the Rime concerning Gryme the Fisher, the founder of Grymesby, Hanelok [read Havelok] the Dane, and his wife Goldborough; and Ritson, in his Dissertation on Romance and Minstrelsy (vol. i, p. lxxxviii of his Metrical Romanceës), makes remarks to the same effect. It was at length, however, discovered by accident in a manuscript belonging to the Bodleian Library: which had been described in the old Catalogue merely as Vitae Sanctorum, a large portion of it being occupied by metrical legends of the Saints.

§ 2. Select Bibliography.

Editions.

1828. The Ancient English Romance of Havelok the Dane, &c., edited for the Roxburghe Club by (Sir) Frederick Madden. (The apparatus, which includes a full Introduction, the French from Gaimar, and the 'Lai d'Havelok', is still precious.)

Skeat, with the assistance of the previous editor. Reprinted with slight corrections and additions in 1889. (The best text.)

1901. Havelok, edited by F. Holthausen, London, 1901. (Normalized in spelling, dialect, and metre.)

1902. The Lay of Havelok the Dane, re-edited by the Rev. Professor W. W. Skeat, Oxford: at the Clarendon Press. (With normalized spelling, the basis of the present edition. The most important notice is that by M. Förster, Anglia, Beiblatt, vol. xiv. 10 ff.)

1928. Havelok, edited by F. Holthausen, third (German) edition, Heidelberg and New York. (Very much improved, and invaluable for its bibliographical references.)

§ 3. The Laud Manuscript. The only complete text of the poem is extant in MS. Laud Misc. 108, in the Bodleian Library. It begins on fol. 204, and is written in double columns each of which contains forty-five lines. Hence a hundred and eighty lines are missing after l. 1444, where a leaf is lost of which no count is taken in the folio numbering. It ends on the back of fol. 219, and is immediately followed, in the same handwriting, by the 'Geste of King Horn'. These two poems form the second part of the MS. Part I is chiefly occupied by Lives of the Saints, printed by Horstmann, E. E. T. S., 1887. The hands are of about the same date as the Havelok portion, that is to say, early fourteenth century. Part III is of the fifteenth century, and contains the Lives of Saint Cecilia and Saint Blaise (also printed by Horstmann); Saint Alexius (printed by Dr. Furnivall in E. E. T. S., no. 69); and a poem called 'Somer Soneday' printed in Reliquiae Antiquae, vol. ii, pp. 7-9; followed by a few other scraps. From the circumstances mentioned in the note to l. 2933, Zupitza conjectured that an older MS., from which the existing copy was made, contained only twenty lines to the page; and Mr. Hall has noted that twenty lines in the copy of King Horn are found to be out of place, which furnishes strong evidence as to the correctness of the suggestion. If so, the MS. must have been made with small pages for the purpose of portability, and would have been well suited for use by a wandering minstrel or reciter of poems. For further details see Hall's King Horn, pp. viii-x.

The arrangement of the page and the script may be studied in Skeat's Twelve Facsimiles of Old English MSS., Plate VII, where fol. 207 v. is reproduced. A portion of the same plate, containing ll. 632-53, is reproduced in the present volume. On the whole the writing is clear, but it is sometimes difficult to distinguish c and t, n and u. The i has a long stroke over it when written next to m or n, but this stroke is frequently misplaced in the word knith = kniht. The letters þ, ȝ are usually distinguished by the dot over ȝ, but þ occasionally has this dot. The few cases of the Anglo-Saxon p for w are not easily distinguished by letter form, and the only certain examples are witdraw, l. 502; wit, l. 997; we, l. 1058; berwen, l. 1426; we, miswritten for wo = who, l. 1914. This evidence is interesting as showing that this letter was then fast going out of use. The absence of ȝ from the Havelok text is the more remarkable since it occurs in King Horn.

The poem is marked out into paragraphs by the use of large letters; and in this edition a slight space is introduced at the end of each paragraph to show this more clearly. The expansion of marks of contraction is denoted in the usual way by the use of italics; thus in l. 9 'man' is printed instead of the form 'mā', as in the MS., and the curl denoting er is represented by printing 'euere' in l. 17. Additions and emendations are enclosed in square brackets, and the punctuation and capitalization are modern.

§ 4. The Cambridge Fragments. By a happy chance the discovery of some fragments of another manuscript fell to Professor Skeat. In the Modern Language Review for October, 1911, pp. 455-7, he published the scraps now included at the end of the text with the following explanation: 'Among the treasures of the Cambridge University Library have been preserved four small and insignificant-looking scraps of paper containing writing which appears to belong to the end of the fourteenth century. They are contained in an envelope marked 4407 (19). One of the scraps was perceived to contain a small portion of the "Proverbs of Hending". The meaning of the rest was less obvious, and I was asked to endeavour to discover it. I soon saw that some of the lines certainly belonged to Havelok the Dane. . . . I have recommended that the eight fragments (recto and verso of four scraps) should be marked a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h. Fragment d contains Havelok ll. 174-83 (partly illegible); e contains ll. 341-64; and f contains ll. 537-44, ten lines not in the other copy, and ll. 545-6, another new line, and ll. 547-9.'

The MS., as Professor Skeat pointed out, is late and corrupt; and it is chiefly important for the ten lines added after l. 544. Are these to be accepted as part of the text of Havelok? Professor Skeat seems to have inclined to accept them, for he remarks (p. 457) 'the aspiration expressed in l. 544 of the Oxford MS. seems to have been adopted to hide a loss of ten lines that should have been preserved'. But there is a good deal to be said against their genuineness. They are extremely feeble and disjointed, and trail on like the work of a man who cannot make up his mind where to stop; they add nothing to the story, and they form just such a digression as the Havelok poet sedulously avoids:

Þat is þe storie for to lenge,
It wolde anuye þis fayre genge.

Again, however the body of the line may be enfeebled in a late MS., we should expect the rimes to be permanent. Yet these few lines contain two riming tags, on fele manere, in mani a kas, which are quite unknown to Havelok, and which, with words like comaundeme[n]t, indicate a much increased French influence. Finally, the lines fail to link up with what follows them. For these reasons they are rather to be regarded as a late addition.

In the same fragment the MS. breaks off tantalizingly just when it seemed to solve the most corrupt passage in Havelok; see the note to ll. 546 ff. On the whole its critical value is slight.

OTHER EARLY VERSIONS OF THE STORY.

§ 5. Geffrei Gaimar. The story appears in two Anglo-French versions, both derived from an earlier source that is now lost; for each contains circumstances that are not mentioned in the other, though there is often a close agreement. The older of these is probably that contained in ll. 37-818 (ed. T. Wright) of the poem entitled L'Estorie des Engles, written by Geffrei Gaimar, apparently between the years 1147 and 1151.¹ In one place (l. 41) he cites Gildas as his authority, but no safe conclusion can be drawn from this vague reference. In another place (l. 758) he mentions a feast given by Havelok—‘si cum nus dit la verai estoire’—i. e. as the true history tells us. There are three MS. copies of Gaimar's version of the story, of which perhaps the best is the Royal MS. (Bibl. Reg. 13. A. xxi) in the British Museum; the two others belong respectively to the Dean and Chapter of Durham (Cathedral MS. C. iv. 27) and to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln (Cathedral MS. H. 18). The Royal MS. was printed in full by Mr. T. Wright for the Caxton Society in 1850. Portions of it have also been printed by M. Michel, in his Chroniques Anglo-Normandes, 8vo, Rouen, 1835; by Sir F. Madden, in his edition of Havelok (as above); and by Mr. Petrie in 1848, for which see Monumenta Historica Britannica, vol. i, p. 764. The latest complete edition of Gaimar is that by Sir T. Duffus Hardy and C. T. Martin in Rerum Britannicarum Medii Aevi Scriptores.¹

§ 6. Le Lai d'Havelok. This Anglo-French version likewise belongs to the twelfth century, and gives a similar story, with some variations. There are two MS. copies, of which one belongs to the collection made by Sir T. Phillipps, and the other is known as the Arundel MS. (or the Norfolk MS.), and is preserved in the Heralds' College, where it is marked E. D. N. no. 14. It was printed in Sir F. Madden's edition of Havelok, pp. 105-146; by M. Michel, Paris, 1833; in the Appendix to T. Wright's edition of Gaimar; and by Hardy and Martin (as above) i. 290 ff.² A brief sketch of its contents is here subjoined.

The Britons made a lay concerning King Havelok, who is surnamed Cuaran. His father was Gunter, King of the Danes. Arthur crossed the sea, and invaded Denmark. Gunter perished by the treason of Hodulf, who gained the kingdom, and held it of Arthur. Gunter had a fine castle, where his wife and son were guarded, being committed to the protection of Grim. The child was but seven years old; but ever as he slept, an odorous flame issued from his mouth. Hodulf sought to kill him, but Grim prepared a ship, wherein he placed the queen and the child, and furnished it with provisions, and set sail from Denmark. On their voyage they encountered pirates ('out-laghes'), who killed them all after a hard fight, excepting Grim, who was an acquaintance of theirs, and Grim's wife and children. Havelok also was saved. They at last arrived at the haven, afterwards named 'Grimesbi' from Grim. Grim there resumed his old trade, a fisherman's, and a town grew up round his hut, which was called Grimsby. The child grew up, and waxed strong. One day Grim said to him, 'Son, you will never thrive as a fisherman; take your brothers with you, and seek service amongst the King's servants'. He was soon well apparelled, and repaired with his two foster-brothers to Nicole [Lincoln]. Now at that time there was a king named Alsi, who ruled over all Nicole and Lindesie;¹ but the country southward was governed by another king, named Ekenbright, who had married Alsi's sister Orewen. These two had one only daughter, named Argentille. Ekenbright, falling ill, committed Argentille to the care of Alsi, till she should be of age to be married to the strongest man that could be found. At Ekenbright's death, Alsi reigned over both countries, holding his court at Nicole. Havelok, on his arrival there, was employed to carry water and cut wood, and to perform all menial offices requiring great strength. He was named Cuaran, which means—in the British language—a scullion. Argentille soon arrived at marriageable age, and Alsi determined to marry her to Cuaran, which would sufficiently fulfil her father's wish—Cuaran being confessedly the strongest man in those parts. To this marriage he compelled her to consent, hoping thereby to disgrace her for ever. Havelok was unwilling that his wife should perceive the marvellous flame, but soon forgot this, and ere long fell asleep. Then had Argentille a strange vision—that a savage bear and some foxes attacked Cuaran, but dogs and boars defended him. A boar having killed the bear, the foxes cried for quarter from Cuaran, who commanded them to be bound. Then he would have put to sea, but the sea rose so high that he was terrified. Next she beheld two lions, at seeing which she was frightened, and she and Cuaran climbed a tree to avoid them; but the lions submitted themselves to him, and called him their lord. Then a great cry was raised, whereat she awoke, and beheld the miraculous flame. 'Sir,' she exclaimed, 'you burn!' But he reassured her, and attempted to give an ordinary explanation of her dream. The next day, however, she again told her dream to a chamberlain, her friend, who said that he well knew a holy hermit who could explain it. The hermit explained to Argentille that Cuaran must be of royal lineage. 'He will be king,' he said, 'and you a queen. Ask him concerning his parentage. Remember also to repair to his native place.' On being questioned, Cuaran replied that he was born at Grimsby; that Grim was his father, and Saburc his mother. 'Then let us go to Grimsby,' she replied. Accompanied by his two foster-brothers, they came to Grimsby; but Grim and Saburc were both dead. They found there, however, a daughter of Grim's, named Kelloc, who had married a tradesman of that town. Up to this time Havelok had not known his true parentage, but Kelloc thought it was now time to tell him, and said: 'Your father was Gunter, the King of the Danes, whom Hodulf slew. Hodulf obtained the kingdom as a grant from Arthur. Grim fled with you, and saved your life; but your mother perished at sea. Your name is HAVELOK. My husband will convey you to Denmark, where you must inquire for a lord named "Sigar l'estal"; and take with you my two brothers.' So Kelloc's husband conveyed them to Denmark, and advised Havelok to go to Sigar and show himself and his wife, as then he would be asked who his wife is. They went to the city of the seneschal, the before-named Sigar, where they craved a night's lodging, and were courteously entertained. But as they retired to a lodging for the night, six men attacked them, who had been smitten with the beauty of Argentille. Havelok defended himself with an axe which he found, and slew five, whereupon the sixth fled. Havelok and his party fled away for refuge to a monastery, which was soon attacked by the townsmen who had heard of the combat. Havelok mounted the tower, and defended himself bravely, casting down a huge stone on his enemies.¹ The news soon reached the ears of Sigar, who hastened to see what the uproar was about. Beholding Havelok fixedly, he called to mind the form and appearance of Gunter, and asked Havelok of his parentage. Havelok replied that Grim had told him he was by birth a Dane, and that his mother perished at sea; and ended by briefly relating his subsequent adventures. Then Sigar asked him his name. 'My name is Havelok,' he said, 'and my other name is Cuaran.' Then the seneschal took him home, and determined to watch for the miraculous flame, which he soon perceived, and was assured that Havelok was the true heir. Therefore he gathered a great host of his friends, and sent for the horn which none but the true heir could sound, promising a ring to any one who could blow it. When all had failed, it was given to Havelok, who blew it loud and long, and was joyfully recognized and acknowledged to be the true King. Then with a great army he attacked Hodulf the usurper, whom he slew with his own hand. Thus was Havelok made King of Denmark.

¹ The Introduction gives a full description of the MSS., of which the Durham copy is the earliest in script and language. The second volume contains a translation of Gaimar and Le Lai d'Havelok.

² The less accessible Phillipps MS. is the earlier. The Arundel MS., f. 148 b, has: 'Athelwold auoit vne fille Goldeburgh, et il regna vi anz. Haueloc esposa meisme cele Goldeburgh, et regna iij. anz.'

But after he had reigned four years, his wife incited him to return to England. With a great number of ships he sailed there, and arrived at Carleflure;¹ and sent messengers to Alsi, demanding the inheritance of Argentille. Alsi was indeed astonished at such a demand as coming from a scullion, and offered him battle. The hosts met at Theford,² and the battle endured till nightfall without a decisive result. But Argentille craftily advised her lord to support his dead men by stakes, to increase the apparent number of his army;³ and the next day Alsi, deceived by this device, treated for peace, and yielded up to his former ward all the land, from Holland⁴ to Gloucester. Alsi had been so sorely wounded that he lived but fifteen days longer. Thus was Havelok king over Lincoln and Lindsey, and reigned over them for twenty years. Such is the lay of Cuaran.

§ 7. Robert Manning of Brunne. It is convenient to consider next the translation of Peter Langtoft's Chronicle made by Robert Manning, of Brunne or Bourne in Lincolnshire, and completed in the year 1338. Manning is the well-known author of the poem entitled Handlyng Synne, written in 1303; and he was well acquainted with our poem, as he quotes it or imitates it at least twice; see notes to ll. 679, 819. The later portion of Manning's translation was printed at Oxford by T. Hearne in 1725, in 2 vols.; and the first part (British history) has since been edited, for the Master of the Rolls, by Dr. Furnivall. Now Langtoft mentions casually Gountere le pere Havelok, de Danays Ray clamez, i.e. 'Gunter, father of Havelok,

² In the Durham MS. it is Tiedfort, i.e. Tetford, not far from Horn-castle, in Lincolnshire.

³ This is an important parallel to a story told about Amleth (Hamlet) in the History by Saxo Grammaticus, bk. iv. 'He resorts to a device to increase the apparent number of his men. He puts stakes under some of the dead bodies of his comrades, to prop them up,' &c.—Gollancz, Hamlet in Iceland, p. xxviii.

⁴ A name given to the south-east part of Lincolnshire.

called King of the Danes', which Gunter he identifies with the Danish invader Godrum, defeated by Alfred in 878. See the edition by T. Wright (Rolls Series, i. 318). When Manning comes to this passage, he translates the French line by Hauelok fader he was, Gunter was his name; where Hearne prints the former name as 'Hanelok'. Then follows the usual account, how Gunter (Godrum) made peace with Alfred, and submitted to be baptized, A.D. 878. After which we have the following interpolated passage, written by Manning on his own account. See ed. Hearne, i. 25:—

Bot I haf grete ferly þat I fynd no man, þat has written in story how Hauelok þis lond wan.
 Noiþer Gildas, no Bede, no Henry of Huntinton,
 No William of Malmesbiri, ne Pers of Bridlynton,
 Writes not in þer bokes of no kyng Athelwold,
 Ne Goldeburgh his douhtere, ne Hauelok not of told,
 Whilk tyme þe were kynges, long or now late,
 þei mak no menyng whan, no in what date.
 Bot þat þise lowed men vpon Inglish tellis,
 Right story can me not ken, þe certeynte what spellis.
 Men sais in Lyncoln castelle ligges ȝit a stone, þat Hauelok kast wele forbi euerilkone.
 & ȝit þe chapelle standes þer he weddid his wife,
 Goldeburgh þe kynges douhter, þat saw is ȝit rise.
 & of Gryme a fisshere men redes ȝit in ryme, þat he bigged Grymesby, Gryme þat ilk tyme.
 Of alle stories of honoure, þat I haf þorgh souht,
 I fynd þat no compiloure of him tellis ouht.
 Sen I fynd non redy þat tellis of Hauelok kynde,
 Turne we to þat story þat we writen fynde.

There cannot exist the smallest doubt that by the 'Ryme' here mentioned, 'that lowed men vpon Inglish tellis', the identical English romance, now before the reader, is referred to. We see also that, in 1338, the traditions respecting Havelok at Lincoln were so strongly preserved, as to point out various localities to which the story had affixed a name; and similar traditions connected with the legend, as we shall find hereafter, existed also at Grimsby. The doubts expressed by the Chronicler, as to their authenticity, or the authority of the 'Ryme', are curious, but only of value so far as they prove that he was ignorant of the existence of a French romance on the subject, or of its reception in Gaimar's historical poem.

§ 8. The Lambeth Interpolation. On comparing the Lambeth MS. of Manning's translation, Sir F. Madden found that this passage had been omitted and replaced by a summary of the Havelok story, which is here printed after Madden's text. Obviously the interpolator had access to sources of which Manning knew nothing.

Forth wente Gounter & his folk al in to Denemark :

§ 9. Relations of the chief versions of the Story

The following table of the names assigned to the chiet characters, which is adapted from Heyman, p. 16, shows at a glance that Gaimar, Le Lai d'Havelok, and the Lambeth Interpolation agree together against the English Havelok. Grim and Havelok are the only names common to all versions.

Gaimar	Lai	Lambeth Interpolation	Havelok
Adelbrict	Ekenbright	Egelbright	Athelwold
Edelsi	Alsi	Edelsi	Godrich
Gunter	Gunter	Gunter	Birkabeyn
Edulf, Odulf	Hodulf	Edulf	Godard
Sigar	Sigar	Sykar	Ubbe
Sebrug	Saburc	Seburc	Leue
Argentille	Argentille	Argill, Argentille	Goldeboru ¹

The relation of the French versions to each other was examined by M. Kupferschmidt in Böhmer's Romanische Studien, iv, pp. 411 ff. But Putnam first pointed out that Gaimar, the Lai, and the Lambeth Interpolation are all derived from a lost French version in rimed couplets. Heyman—who gives an excellent analysis—and Deutschbein agree in essentials with Putnam's results. It is scarcely possible to determine the relation of the French versions to the English poem; nor, on the evidence of a single complete manuscript, can the earlier history of the English poem be demonstrated.

§ 10. Minor Versions. Some dozen minor versions are discussed by Madden. One of these, from Le Petit Bruit by Rauf de Boun, a Lincolnshire man, bases on the English story, as the names show. Another from the prose Brut d'Engleterre is the subject of an interesting article by Brie in Englische Studien, vol. xxxv. 359 ff. Brie shows that this version, though it agrees in the main with the French story, borrows certain traits from the English, including the name Birkebeyn for Havelok's father. The rest are of little importance for our present purposes, as practically all represent the French, and not the English version of the story, in a more or less debased form.

§ 11. Local traditions. We find that Camden briefly alludes to the story in a contemptuous manner (p. 353; ed. 8vo, Lond. 1587); but Gervase Holles is far from being disposed to regard it as fabulous. 'In his MSS. collections for Lincolnshire' (says Sir F. Madden) 'preserved in MS. Harl. 6829, he thus speaks of the story we are examining¹ :—

And it will not be amisse, to say something concerning y^e Common tradition of her first founder Grime, as y^e inhabitants (with a Catholique faith) name him. The tradition is thus. Grime (say they) a poore Fisherman (as he was launching into y^e Riuer for fish in his little boate vpon Humber) espyed not far from him another little boate, empty (as he might conceaue) which by y^e fauour of y^e wynde & tyde still approached nearer & nearer vnto him. He betakes him to his Oares, & meetes itt, wherein he founde onely a Childe wrapt in Swathing Clothes, purposely exposed (as it should seeme) to y^e pittylesse [rage] of y^e wilde & Wide Ocean. He, moued with pittie, takes itt home, & like a good foster-father carefully nourisht itt, & endeaoured to nourishe it in his owne occupation: but y^e childe contrarily was wholly deuoted to exercises of Actiuity, & when he began to write man, to Martiall sports, & at length by his Signall Valour obteyned such renowne, y^t he marryed y^e King of England's daughter, & last of all founde who was his true Father, & that he was Sonne to y^e King of Denmarke; & for y^e Comicke close of all, that Haueloke (for such was his name) exceedingly aduanced & enriched his Foster-father Grime, who thus enriched, builded a fayre Towne neare the place where Hauelocke was founde, & named it Grimesby. Thus say some: others differ a little in y^e Circumstances, as namely, that Grime was not a Fisherman, but a Merchant, & that Hauelocke should be preferred to y^e King's Kitchin, & there liue a longe tyme as a Scullion: but however y^e Circumstances differ, they all agree in y^e consequence, as concerning y^e Towne's foundation, to which (sayth y^e Story) Hauelocke y^e Danish prince afterward graunted many immunityes. This is y^e famous Tradition concerning Grimsby w^{ch} learned Mr. Cambden gives so little credit to, that he thinkes it onely illis dignissima, qui anilibus fabulis noctem solent protrudere.

And a little farther on he makes the remark, 'that Hauelocke did sometymes reside in Grimsby, maybe gathered from a great blew Boundry-Stone, lying at y^e East ende of Briggowgate, which retaines y^e name of Hauelock's-Stone to this day. Agayne y^e great Priuiledges & Immunityes, that this Towne hath in Denmarke aboue any other in England (as freedome from Toll, & y^e rest), may fairely induce a Beleife, that some preceding favour or good turne called on this remuneration. But lastly (which prooffe I take to be instar omnium) the Common Seale of y^e Towne, & that a most auncient one,' &c.

§ 12. The Grimsby seal. The copy of this seal, as it appears in the present edition, is due to the courtesy of J. Hopkin, Esq., of Grimsby, whose description of it (first printed, in a slightly different form, in Notes and Queries, 2nd Series, vol. xi, p. 41; see also p. 216) is here reproduced (with some abridgement) from Professor Skeat's edition.

The ancient Town Seal of Grimsby is engraven on a circular piece of brass, not very thick, inscribed 'Sigillvm Communitatis Grimebye'. Gryme ('Gryem') is represented as a man of gigantic stature, with comparatively short hair, a shaven chin and a moustache, holding in his right hand a drawn sword, and bearing on his left arm a circular shield with an ornate boss and rim. Between his feet is a conic object, possibly intended for a helmet, as it resembles the chapel-de-fer worn by William Rufus on his Great Seal. On the right hand of Gryme stands Haveloc ('Habloc').¹ Above Gryme is represented a hand, being emblematical of the hand of Providence by which Haveloc was preserved, and near the hand is the star which marks the point where the inscription begins and ends. Above Haveloc is represented a crown, and in his right hand is a battle-axe. In his left hand is a ring which he is presenting to Goldburgh ('Goldebvrgh'), who stands on the left side of Gryme, and whose right hand is held towards the Ring. Over her head is a Regal Diadem, and in her left hand is a Sceptre. Sir F. Madden states that it is certain that this seal is at least as old as the time of Edward I., and therefore contemporaneous with the MS., as the legend is written in a character which after the year 1300 fell into disuse.

§ 13. Localization of the Story. Lincoln and Grimsby are the centres of Havelok's activities; and the poet speaks familiarly of the former town, its bridge, ll. 875, 881, and its green, ll. 2828-9. The earliest French version is that of Gaimar, whose patroness, Constance FitzGilbert, was a Lincolnshire lady. Robert Manning, who first mentions the English story, and imitates lines from it, lived at Brunne (Bourne) in Lincolnshire. The local traditions mentioned by him and by Holles, with the Grimsby seal, point in the same direction. There, too, we should expect the strong Norse influence, and such grammatical forms as the rimes establish for the original draft of the poem. It is true that the extant MS. has probably passed through many copies, and no longer presents a pure dialect; but there is every reason to believe that Havelok was originally written in

Lincolnshire. If, then, it be admitted that the name Havelok is in itself a sufficient evidence of Celtic influence (see below, § 16), it is probable that this influence came from Cumberland rather than from Wales.

§ 14. Date. The date of the MS., which belongs to the early fourteenth century, gives a latter limit. The echoes of the poem in Robert Manning's *Handlyng Synne*¹ fix the date before 1303, in which year Handlyng Synne was written. In a letter to the Athenaeum, Feb. 23, 1889, Hales attempts to establish the earlier limit from internal evidence. He argues that Roxburgh first became a border fortress in 1296, and therefore could not well be referred to as marking the northern frontier before that date.² Again, the Parliament at Lincoln (l. 1178) must be the Parliament of 1301 (at which the Archbishop of York was present). And at l. 2521 there may be an allusion to the foundation of a Friary of Black Monks about 1280. For these and slighter reasons he would date the present poem about 1301.

The decisiveness of Hales's arguments, doubted at the time by Liebermann (Deutsche Zeitschrift für Geschichtswissenschaft, 1890, pp. 154 ff.), has been lessened by later research. In Englische Studien, vol. xxxii. 319 f., Van der Gaaf points out that there was a Parliament at Lincoln as early as 1226. Deutschbein, in a very interesting discussion of the date, pp. 159 ff., shows that Roxburgh came into English hands as early as 1174, in ransom for William of Scotland, and himself inclines to a date in the second half of the thirteenth century. The whole subject is one of great difficulty, and a most valuable contribution is made by Professor Skeat in his discussion of final -e.¹

§ 15. 'If we were to accept the date as being about 1300, and the dialect as that of Lincolnshire, it would follow that the grammar of the Lay and that of the Handlyng Synne must be practically identical. But we are confronted by the obvious fact that they are nothing of the kind, nor could ever have been so. Compare, for example, ll. 1-100 with the ll. 5575-674 of Handlyng Synne, as given in Specimens of English, ed. Morris and Skeat, pp. 50-3. In ll. 1-100 of the Lay (omitting examples of final -en) there are at least 32 instances in which the scansion of the line is incomplete unless we suppose a final -e to be sounded (as e.g. in l. 10, we must read burt-è); and there are at least 66 lines with feminine rhymes, of which all but 10 involve a final -e. But in the 100 lines of Handlyng Synne, there are only 18 cases (not at the end of a line) where the scansion requires a final -e; and hardly 40 lines with true feminine rhymes, 6 of which involve no final -e. In other words, the Lay has 88 examples in which the final -e constitutes a syllable where Manning has but 52.² If we compare another 100 lines, we shall obtain similar results; and even if these calculations be somewhat inexact, the general conclusion is not much affected. The difference in grammatical usage is very clearly marked. It seems to follow that, if the two poems were written in the same dialect, the Lay must have been originally written at a considerably earlier date; and that it acquired additions and alterations in the process of transmission from one reciter to another. Compare, for example, the following lines from Havelok and from Manning's Handlyng Synne, as regards the treatment of final -e:—

All-e gret-en swip-e sor-e; Hav. 236.

But son-e ded-e hir-e fet-e; 316.

þin-e cherl-es, þin-e hin-e; 620.

Grim-es son-es all-e þre; 1399.

But to þe por' boþ' mek' and kynde; H. S. 5692.

þat þe por' man of hym had; 5730.

And þoght' gret wunder and seþen seyð; 5740.

Unto a cherch-e boþ' þey yede; 5777.

'We can only conclude that the extant copy shows the poem in quite a late stage, with just a few interpolations in it to bring it up to date.¹ The first draft of the poem must surely have been composed earlier than 1300; but how much earlier it is impossible to say. That the dialect was, in the first instance, that of Lincolnshire, is consistent with the fact that we can still detect the characteristic suffix -es of the pres. s. indicative as occurring in fifteen unambiguous rhymes (306, 396, 597, 1359, 1443, 1693, 1781, 1851, 1913, 2105, 2323, 2341, 2392, 2573, 2983); and the pl. suffix -e at the end of ll. 1325, 2099, and 2583.'

§ 16. Historical Basis of the Story. In the French versions Havelok is called Cuaran (Cuheran, Coraunt); and Cuaran, which is a Celtic word meaning 'a sock, a brogue of untanned leather or skin', is the surname of a famous Viking, Olaf Sictricson, who was on the defeated side at Brunanburh in 937, and died in 981 (see Dictionary of National Biography). In Englische Studien, vol. iii. 533 ff., Storm first proved that Havelok is a form of the Celtic name Abloc, Abloec, &c., which is often substituted for the

¹ Lines 138, 139, 264, 265, can be omitted without injury to the sense. And l. 1176 has to be emended, in order to make ll. 1177-1180 fit in.

Norse name Olaf-r, OE. Anlaf. Whether they are phonetically equivalent is open to doubt, as M. Förster points out in Anglia, Beiblatt, vol. xiv, p. 13.

Hence until recently it has been assumed that the story of Havelok was the story of Olaf Sictricson, though the points of connexion were not very clear. Heyman, however, puts forward a new theory. He shows that the facts of Olaf's life have little in common with the events related in Havelok; and supposes that the deeds of King Swein, who became King of England in 1013, are really the basis of the Havelok tale, but have been fathered upon Olaf Sictricson. He considers further that in some points stories connected with Olaf Tryggvason, the conqueror at Maldon, have been fused into the lay. Quite independently, Deutschbein also denies anything more than a nominal connexion with Olaf Sictricson, and sees in the Havelok tale the deeds of Olaf's uncle Reginwald, again with some features from the life of Olaf Tryggvason.

If these divergent views point to any result, it is that the Havelok story corresponds to no history at all. Popular romances must not be taken too seriously, even when they contain historical names. Only two such names occur in the English story: Havelok, who on the evidence of other versions is identified with Olaf Sictricson, a tenth-century king; and his father Birkabeyn—Roger Hoveden's Swerre Birkebain, chief of the Birkibeinar,¹—who became King of Norway in 1184. The peculiar parallelism of the main events of the story, the repeated happy coincidences which are of its essence, belong not to history, but to the story-book.

§ 17. Legendary Elements. To discuss all the analogues of the Havelok story would require a volume in itself, for it uses many of the stock themes of romance.

The flame of fire issuing from Havelok's mouth as he lay asleep (ll. 591, 1256) reminds us of Servius Tullius, around whose infant head flames were seen to play in his slumbers. The birth-mark which discloses his rank at a critical moment, his visions of conquest, the descriptions of the games and festivals, all these have their analogues in many mediaeval romances. More characteristic features of the story are also met with elsewhere. In the Introduction to his Hamlet in Iceland, London, 1898, Professor Gollancz discusses the possible connexion between Hamlet and Havelok; and more recently R. Zenker, Boeve-Amlethus, Berlin and Leipzig, 1905, has considered the same point, and extended the comparison to the Beves Romance. Deutschbein claims kinship with the Celtic Meriaduc Saga; and there are many points of contact with French romances. It cannot, however, be said in any one case that a definite relation in essential incidents has been proved beyond doubt.

§ 18. Metre. The natural method of scansion followed by Professor Skeat is fully explained in his article on 'The Scansion of English Poetry', printed in the Phil. Soc. Transactions for 1908; and in his Chaucer, vol. vi, p. lxxxiv. As yet many points in the history of Anglo-French and Middle English metres remain controversial, and our knowledge is certainly not precise enough to decide such minute points as the order of words in the verse, or the omission and addition of unstressed syllables, against the authority of the single manuscript. Smoothness to a modern ear is not a sufficient defence for emendation, because it is not known what the poet's ideal of smoothness was, or to what extent he attained his aim in practice.

The poem is written in rimed couplets, with occasional larger groups of verses riming together, as for instance ll. 87-105. Alliteration, the native habit, is rare, though it appears in a few phrases like stark and strong; lef and loth; sory and sorful; felede his foos. Each line contains four stresses. For the rest, where the text is sound in grammar and sense, it is safest to give the MS. the benefit of any doubt, and to allow such normal licences as inversion of the accent, and substitution of one or three syllables for the typical disyllabic foot.

§ 19. The Rimes. The study of rime-words is of great importance; for while the body of the line, especially in a popular tale, is subject to continual alterations, the rime-words are comparatively stable. This may be seen by comparing the text of the later Cambridge Fragments. Hence the importance of rimes for determining the original text and dialect of the poem.

Many couplets as they stand in the MS. do not rime. Sometimes we have to do with conventional rimes, as at ll. 21-2 rym : fyn. Sometimes scarcity of rime-words may account for the deficiency, as at ll. 1101-2 shop : hok. The remainder were once explained as assonances; but in early texts which rime carefully—and Havelok is such a text—assonance is only to be assumed in the last resort. In general, a false rime in Havelok indicates corruption. Scribes sometimes substitute an English for a Norse word or form, as in the instances pointed out in the notes to ll. 1037-8 and 1397-8; sometimes they write an English alternative form instead of the original riming form; sometimes they blunder hopelessly.

So whenever a pair of words give a defective rime, it is necessary to consider the possible alternatives. In ll. 1698-9, for instance, the MS. has shewe : lowe. The source of the first word, OE. scēawian, according as the diphthong is stressed on the first or second element, yields ME. shēwe or shāwe; and shāwe remains in the North, but elsewhere becomes shōwe. In the same way OE. hlāw gives ME. lāw or lōw; but its by-form hlæw would give ME. lēw. Hence any of the rimes schewe : lewe; shawe : lawe; showe : lowe may have been in the original, as far as can be judged from this case. Again, ll. 2698-9 show gres : is; where gres has an alternative form gras, and is has an alternative Northern form es. Here we must choose the points of contact gres : es.

For inflexions and phonology, too, rimes are of the highest importance. But it is necessary to distinguish those which are decisive from those which are ambiguous. Thus in ll. 2282-3 plattinde : gangande, the rime might be restored by making both participles end in -inde, or -ande, or -ende, or -ing. The instance merely proves that the extant manuscript does not retain the original forms. But at ll. 1692-3 nedes : fedes, because nedes is the adverb, it is clear that the maker of the rime used the ending -es in the third person present indicative singular fedes. Or, to take a point of phonology, ll. 1924-5 her : per are ambiguous, since the known alternative forms har : par or hor : por would rime perfectly. But in ll. 234-5 sor : hor, the Norse form hor (har) is proved, since sor (sar) < OE. sār can have no e forms.

§ 20. Phonology. With this help it is possible to deal with some points in the phonology of the original.

(1) OE. and ON. ā remains ā in the North, but becomes open o [̄o] in the South and most of the Midlands. In Havelok both forms appear in the extant MS., ō predominating. But the rimes show bāpe (bōpe) at ll. 2595, 2936, riming with rape < OE. hrāpe, which has ā by lengthening in ME., but never o. On the other hand OE. swā gives in ME. swā and s(w)ō, which latter, owing to the influence of w, has a by-form s(w)ō with close ō. This form must be present in the rimes with ll. 713, 2739 do < OE. dōn, and with ll. 325, 2136, 2961 to < OE. tō. These instances are sufficient to prove that OE. ā had in some cases become ȣ in the dialect of the original. Hence presumably Havelok was written in a district where both ā and ȣ were possible, that is to say, in the North Midlands.

(2) OE. ȝ (umlaut of ū) remains in the South-west with the spelling u; appears as ē in the South-east; and as ī in the Midlands and North. Therefore the frequent rimes like ll. 587-8, 1253-4 fir:schir (OE. fȝyr, sār), and ll. 1379-80, 1419-20 inne:sinne (OE. innan, synn) are decisive, in the absence of conflicting evidence, for the North or Midlands.

(3) ME. ō has two values, open ȣ (the sound in law), and close ȣ̄, as in French tôt. Open ȣ normally derives from OE. or ON. ā, and ō lengthened in open syllables. Close ȣ̄ derives from OE. ō; and the two sounds are so different that they can hardly rime together. Apparent instances in Havelok are common so and l. 1805 two, where the close sound is due to the influence of w as explained above under (1); and ll. 789-90 hom:grom, a difficult rime.

(4) In the same way ME. ē has two values, open ē̄ and close ē̄̄, with sounds corresponding to air (roughly) and French été. Open ē̄ normally corresponds to OE. (Mercian) æ, ēa, and ē lengthened in open syllables. Close ē̄̄ corresponds to OE. (Mercian) ē, ēo. In Havelok the word se < OE. sæ, 'sea' rimes close, e.g. at ll. 519, 553, 561, 581, 673, 719; as it does in other ME. texts which generally keep ē̄ and ē̄̄ apart. But in Havelok normal ē̄ and ē̄̄ commonly rime together, perhaps because in certain parts of the North and Midlands ē̄ > ē̄̄ before dental consonants d, t, s, n, r, l; see Bülbring, Furnivall Miscellany, p. 42. Observe for instance ll. 11-12 y-here : y-lere ; ll. 244-5 reden : leden ; ll. 2084-5 bede : rede ; ll. 995-6 clene : grene.

(5) Where a text has any claims to belong to the thirteenth century, it is worth noticing what evidence it contains for the lengthening of short vowels in open syllables. In the great majority of cases such vowels in Havelok rime only with themselves. There are only two clear indications of lengthening in Teutonic rime pairs : ll. 2594, 2937 raþe < OE. hræpe which rimes with bāþe. Further see the notes to ll. 55-6, 1331-32, and 2496-7.

§ 21. The Phonology of some Norse words. Havelok is saturated with Norse words. Indeed their number is so great as to be in itself evidence of composition in some stronghold of Norse influence, such as Lincolnshire is known to have been. Here we have indeed a mixed dialect. The poet uses at will a Norse flexional form like the plural hend, 'hands', and prefers Norse words where the English would pass as well for rime, e.g. ll. 240-1, laten : graten or ll. 1800-1, coupe : loupe, where the English leten : greten, chepe : lepe would, in form at least, have served. In many cases, as is shown in the Notes, English copyists have removed the Norse forms, often spoiling the rimes. A few general tests of Norse loan-words are here given, and the references must be sought in the Glossary.

(1) To Non-WS. ɛ (WS. æ), which becomes ē in ME., corresponds an ON. ā, which in ME. becomes ē in the South and South Midlands, but remains ā in the North.

Hence the ON. vārum, hār ('hair'), lāta, grāta, rāða, rāð, yield in the poem the forms wōre (wāre), hōr, lāte, grāte, rōþe, rāþ, while the corresponding English words with æ or ɛ yield ME. wēre, hēr, lēte, grēte, rēden, rēd, all of which occur in Havelok.

(2) To OE. ā, which yields in ME. ā or ē as above, corresponds ON. ei. Hence ON. ei, greifi, bleik-r, veik-r, -leik-r (suffix), leik-r, leika, svein-n, keisari, teit-r, beita, leita, greiða appear as ay, greyue, bleike, wayke, (hende)-leik, leyk, layke, sweyn, caysere, teyte, beite, leite, greyþe, of which words bleike has a corresponding English form blake, 'white', in the poem, while þon corresponds to (Birki)þein.

(3) To OE. ēa, which yields in ME. ē, corresponds an ON. au (ō), which appears in ME. as ou, ow, (ō). Hence þauh* (þōh), auk (ōk), gaula, kaupa, laupa, rauta, blaut-r appear as þou(h), ok, goulen, coupe, loupe, rowte, bloute; besides which occur the English forms þey(h), ek, lepe.

(4) OE. k + a front vowel yields in ME. ch, whereas ON. k remains unpalatalized. Hence ON. kirkja, serk-r, kriki give kirke, serk, crice. Havelok shows no instance of chirche < OE. cirice.

(5) In the same way ON. has g, where OE. has the palatalized sound in modern bridge. Hence, as the rimes prove, rig is ON. hrygg-r, not OE. hrycg, modern ridge; leng is ON. lengja, not OE. lengān.

Other divergent forms are wil < ON. vill-r, not OE. wilde; sterne < ON. stjarna, not OE. steorra; brini < ON. brynja, not OE. byrne. For further borrowings see the Glossary.

§ 22. Inflexions. Nouns. As regards the nouns employed, we may remark that the final e is almost always sounded in the oblique cases, and especially in the dative case; as in nedð, stedð, &c. (see ll. 86–105); willð, 85; wisð, 1713; blissð, 2187; criceð, 2450; cf. the adjectives lessð, 1830; longð, 2299; also the nominatives rosð, 2919; newð, 2974; and the genitives herte, 70; mere, 2478; with -e < OE. -an. In the plural, the final e is fully pronounced in adjectives: allð, 2; hardð, 143; bleikð, 470; starkð, 1015; &c.; and it is common in weak singulars such as (þe) beste,

87. Not only does the phrase none kines, of no kind, occur in ll. 861, 1140, but we find the unusual phrase neuere kines, of never a kind, in l. 2691; though neuere is here almost certainly an error for none. Among the numerals, we find not only þre (1399), but ON. þrinne.

Pronouns. In the MS. the first personal pronoun occurs in many forms in the nominative, as i, y, hi, ich, ic, hic, and even ihc; the oblique cases take the form me. For the second person, we have þu, pou, in the nominative, and also tu, when preceded by þat, as in l. 2903. We may notice also hijs for his, 47; he for they (generally); sho, 112, scho, 126, sche, 1721, for she. The forms she and sho are explained in the New Eng. Dict. as different developments of OE. sēo, feminine article. Note the peculiar dual form unker, of you two, 1882; and the pl. es, 'them', for which see the Glossary. This es or is is possibly short for his, actually used in the accusative plural, though some equate it to the G. sie; see the two articles on †His in the New Eng. Dict. The most noteworthy possessive pronouns are minè, pl. 1365; þinè, pl. 620; his or hise, pl. hišè, 34; vrè, 606; youres, 2801; hirè, 84, 2918, with which cf. the dat. sing. hirè of the personal pronoun, 300. Þis is plural, and means these, in l. 1145; but in l. 606 it is short for þis is. As in other old English works, men is frequently an impersonal pronoun, answering to the French on, and is followed by a singular verb; as in men ringes, 390; men seyth and suereth, 647; men fetes, 2341; men nam, 900; men birþe, 2101; men dos, 2434; cf. folk sau, 2410; but there are a few instances of its use with a plural verb, as men haueden, 901, men shulen, 747. The former is the more usual construction.

Verbs. The infinitives of verbs rarely have y- prefixed; three examples are y-here, 11; y-lerc, 12; y-se, 334. Nor is the same prefix common before past participles; yet we find i-gret, 163; i-groten, 285; and i-maked, 5, as well as maked, 23. Infinitives end commonly in -en or -e, as riden, 26, y-lere, 12; also in -n, as don, 117, leyn, 718; notice also forms like flo, 612; slo, 1364; fle, 1195. The present singular, 3rd person, of the indicative, ends both in -es or -s, and -eth or -th, the former being the more usual. Examples are longes, 396, 1443, haldes, 1382, fedes, 1693, bes, 1744, comes, 1767, leues, 1781, 2105, glides, 1851, harnes, 1913, haues, 1952, etes, 2036, beres, 2323, fetes, 2341, bedes, 2392, ledes, 2573, strenes, 2983; dos, 1913; also eteth, 672, haueth, 804, bikenneth, 1269, suereth, dereth, 647, 648; lip, 673, doth, 1876. The form of the 2nd person is -est, in louest (before a vowel), 1663; but it is commonly -es, as haues, 688, etes, 907, getes, 908, slepes, 1283, weldes, 1359; cf. dos, 2390, slos, 2706, mis-gos, 2707; and this still more marked in rime, as wenes, 598. The same ending is observable in the past tense, as in dedes, 2393, reftes, 2394, feddes and claddes, 2907. The AS. meaht, miht, answers to maght, 1348; cf. ll. 689, 852, 1219. The subjunctive mood shows the forms bute þou gonge, 690, þat þu fonge, 856, &c.; cf. bede, 668. In the 3rd person, present tense, of the same mood, we have the -e fully pronounced, as in shildè, 16, yeuè, 22, lesè, 333, leuè, 334, redè, 687; and in l. 544 wreken should undoubtedly be wrekè, since the -en belongs to the plural, as in moten, 18. The plural of the indicative present commonly ends in -en, as, we hauen, 2798, ye witen, 2208, þei taken, 1833; or, very rarely, in -eth, as ye bringeth, 2425, he (they) strangleth, 2584. Sometimes the final -n is lost; note wone, 1325, to-deyle, 2099, binde, 2583 (in rimes). The present tense has often a future signification, as in eteth, 672, etes, 907, getes, 908; and in beth, 1260, bes, 1744.

NOTE. The rimes show that the third person singular in -es belongs to the original dialect of the poem (examine the examples). It was afterwards copied out in the south of England, by a scribe who frequently turned -es into -eth. The only examples at the end of a line are suereth, dereth, 647-8; instead of sweres, deres.

Past tense. Of the third person singular and plural of the past tense the following are selected examples. WEAK VERBS: hauede, 770, sparede, 898, yemedè, 975, semedè, 976, sparkede, 2144, pankede, 2189; pl. loueden, 955, leykeden, 954, woundeden, 2429, stareden, 1037, yemedede, 2276, makeden, 554, sprauleden, 475. Also calde, 2115, gredde, 2417, herde, 2410, kepte, 879, fedde, 786, ledde, 785, spedde, 756, clapte, 1814, kiste, 1279; auhte, 743, lauhte, 744, bitauhte, 2212; pl. herden, 150, brenden, 594, kisten, 2162, ledden, 1246. Compare the past participles hosed, 971, mixed, 2533, parred, 2439, gadred, 2577; reft, 1367, keft, 2005, wend, 2138, hyd, 1059; told, 1036, sold, 1638, wrouht, 1352. There are also at least three past participles in -et, as spuset, 1266, slenget, 1923, grepet, 2615; to which add MS. weddeth, beddeth, 1127; this -et or -eth is an AF. form of -ed. In l. 2057, knawed seems to represent the modern 'knowed'; see the note.

STRONG VERBS: third person singular, past tense, bar, 815, bad, 1415, yaf or gaf, 218, 315, spak, 2389, kam, 766 (spelt cham, 1873), nam, 900, kneu, 2468, hew, 2729, lep, 1777, let (spelt leth), 2651, slep, 1280, wex, 281; drou, 705, for, 2943, low, 903, slow, 1807, hof, 2750, stod, 986, tok, 751, wok, 2093; pl. beden, 2774, youen or gouen, 164, comen, 1017 (spelt keme, 1208), nomen, 2790 (spelt neme, 1207), knewen, 2149, lophen, 1896, slepen, 2128; drowen, 1837, foren, 2380, lowen, 1056, slowen, 2414, &c. By way of further examples, we may instance the singular forms bigan, 1357, barw, 2022, karf, 471, swank, 788, warp, 1061, shon, 2144, clef, 2643, sau, 2410, grop, 1965, drof, 725, shof, 892, fauth (= fauht), 1990; pl. bigunnen, 1011, sowen, 1055, gripen, 1790, driue for driuen, 1966; also bunden, 2436, schuten, 2431 (also schoten, 1864, shoten, 1838), leyen, 2132, &c. Compare the past participles boren, 1878, youen or yeuen, 1643, cumen, 1436, nomen, 2265 (also numen, 2581), laten, 1925, waxen, 302, drawen, 1925, slawen, 2000. The two last become drawe, slawe in ll. 1802, 1803.

We should also observe the past tenses spen (i. e. spende), 1819; stirt, 812, citte, 942, bere (subj.), 974, kipte, 1050, flow, 2502; and the past participles demd for demed, 2488, giue for giuen, 2488, *henge*d, 1429, plat, 2755.

Imperative Mood. Examples of the imperative mood singular, 2nd person, are et, sit, 925, late, 1376, bringge, 1381; in the plural, the usual ending is -es, as in lipēs, 2204, comes, 1798, folwes, 1885, lokes, 2292, bes, 2246, to which set belong slos, 2596, dos, 2592; but there are instances of the ending -eth also, as in cometh, 1885, yeueþ, 911, to which add doth, 2037, goth, 1780; MS. herknet (for herkneth), 1. Indeed, both forms occur in one line; as in Cometh swiþe, and folwes me (1885).

Of reflexive verbs, we meet with me dremede, 1284, me haueth met, 1285, me þinkes, 2169, him hungrede, 654, him semede, 1652, him stondes, 2983, him rewede, 503. The present participles, curiously enough, end mostly in -inde, as fastinde, 865, grotinde, 1390, lauhwinde, 946, plattinde, 2282, starinde, 508; but we also find gangande, 2283, driuende, 2702. Compare the noun tipande, 2279, which is a Norse form, tíðindi (pl.) being the Icelandic for 'tidings'. The suffix -ing occurs as a noun-ending only, never in the present participle. Examples of it are greting, 166, dreping, i. e. slaughter, 2684, buttinge, skirming, wrastling, putting, harping, piping, reding, see ll. 2322-7; also coruning, 2948, ioying, 2949. Amongst the auxiliary verbs may be noted the use of cone, 622, as the subjunctive form of canst; we mone, 840, answering to prov. E. mun, i.e. must. We should particularly observe the use of the comparatively rare verbs birþ, it behoves, pa. t. birde, it behoved, and þurte, he need; for which see the Glossary.

The prefix to- is employed in two senses, as explained in the Glossary, s. v. To-. In to-brised, to-deyle, &c., it is equivalent to the German zer- and Latin dis-; of its other and rarer use, wherein it answers to the German zu- and to the Gothic du-, there is but one instance, viz. in the word to-yede, 765, which signifies 'went to'; cf. Germ. zugehen, 'to go to', zugang (AS. tōgang), 'access', 'approach'. There are several instances of the peculiar syntax whereby the infinitive mood active partakes of a passive signification, as in he made him kesten in feteres, 'he caused him to be cast into fetters'; l. 81. It may be considered as a phrase in which we should now supply the word men, and we may interpret it by 'he caused [men] to cast him into fetters and to fasten him securely'; for in ll. 1784, 1785, the phrase is repeated in a less ambiguous form. See also l. 86. So also, in ll. 2611, 2612, we must consider keste, late, sette, to be in the infinitive mood. This construction is at once understood by comparing it with the German er liess ihn binden, he caused him to be bound. In l. 2352 appears the most unusual form ilker, written for ilk here, i.e. each of them. The word þrie, 730, answers to the ME. adverb thrie, thrice, but it must be an error, possibly for yete; liues, 509, is an adverb ending in -es, originally a genitive case. Þus-gate is, according to Dr. Morris, unknown to the Southern dialect; it occurs in ll. 785, 2419, 2586; cf. hwilgat, 836.

§ 23. The Spelling. The manuscript spelling appears, at first sight, to be of a very lawless character, but is easily understood in the light of Professor Skeat's discovery (in 1897) that many of our earlier MSS., especially those of the thirteenth century, abound with spellings which can only be understood rightly when we observe that the scribe was of Norman birth, and more accustomed to the spelling of Anglo-French than to that of the native language of the country, which he had acquired with some difficulty, and could not always correctly pronounce. This curious phenomenon, due to the resolute attempt on the part of the Norman to acquire English, is fully explained in Professor Skeat's paper on 'The Proverbs of Alfred', read on May 7, 1897, and printed in the Transactions of the Philological Society for that year (p. 399). See also the canons in an Appendix to 'Notes on English Etymology', p. 471. With this clue, the spelling of our MS. becomes perfectly intelligible, and the English consonants are so easily recovered, that it seems convenient to restore the usual Middle-English spelling in a number of instances, and to relegate the Anglo-French spellings of the MS. to the bottom of the page, where every variation between the printed text and the MS. is carefully recorded, according to the notice at the bottom of p. 1. The correspondences between the AF. and ME. spellings are easily tabulated.

MS. SPELLINGS REMOVED TO THE FOOT-NOTES.

(1) g occasionally appears as gh in ghod, 255; bringhe, 65; pinghe, 66.

(2) h is omitted in aueden, 163; auelok, 503; &c. Conversely h is added inorganically in her, 15; holde, 30; hayse, 59; &c.

(3) hw frequently appears as w in Wo, 4; Wil, 6; with, 48; &c.

(4) -ht, commonly written ht or 3t in ME., appears as :—
ht very rarely, e. g. Riht, 1826.

th commonly, e. g. brouth, 84; nouth, 149; &c.

þ is not used in this value.¹

cht in mouchte, 147 (þouthte, 1073, may be a slip).

cth in micth, 35; knich, 77, 80; rich, 78; &c.

ct in bitaucte, 206; awcte, 207; mowcte, 210; &c.

t in browt, 58; nowt, 123; knit, 2427; &c.

(5) sh as s in sal, 628; same, 1941; sule, 2419; &c., and in fleys, 216, neys, 217.

(6) t as th in with, 48; woth, 213; leth, 252; neth, 808; &c.

(7) th as t finally in Herknet, 1; wit, 19, 52, 113; &c.

(8) u as w in Hw, 93; &c., and, with loss of h, as w, 120; &c. Note the MS. in l. 288.

(9) wu appears as w in wman, 174, 281; swngen, 226; wrþe, 434; wnden, 546; wlf, 573.

There are also a great many careless spellings, the commonest of which is the omission of a final consonant, here enclosed in brackets, e. g. hel[d], 109; gol[d], 357; forthwar[d], 731; lon[d], 340; we[l], 115, 287, 392; þe[r], 142, 476, 639; bes[t], 354.

Less common is the omission of a medial consonant, as in k[n]aue, 481; b[r]igge, 881; goldebo[r]w, 1103.

Confusion between letters of similar form occurs in kayn for þayn,² 31, 1327; and in Ke for He at the beginning of ll. 86, 87.

A certain number of the spellings consigned to the footnotes represent genuine English forms: such are drinchen, 553; dreinchen, 561, with common raising of the stem vowel; wilte, 528, 1135; þenkeste, 578, with normal weakening of unstressed u to e; may(h)t, 641, 689, 845, 852, &c. Very likely here belong regular cueril-del, which seems to show an assimilation; and common an for and.

² On confusion of k:þ see Zupitza, Anglia, vol. iii. 375.

MS. SPELLINGS RETAINED.

(1) qu for OE. hw is a common spelling in the North and Midlands, and points to strong aspiration. Examples are qui, 1650; qual, 753; Quanne, 134, 162; &c.

(2) r strongly trilled is indicated in the spellings boren: koren, 1878-9; arum: harum, 1982-3, 2408-9.

(3) ũ in the neighbourhood of letters of similar form like m, n, u, is written o for the sake of distinctness. Hence gome: trome, 7-8, represent OE. gūma, trūma; and wone: sone, 246-7, 1325-6, represent OE. wūnian, sūnu. In ll. 2580-1, comen: numen, both representations are found. This spelling first becomes common in the second half of the thirteenth century; see Napier, History of the Holy Rood-tree, E. E. T. S., 103, p. 85. The pronunciation remains [ũ].

(4) ū appears sometimes as u (w), sometimes as ou (ow), the French spelling. The riming pairs often show both forms, e. g. mouth: suth, 433-4; doun: tun, 1630-1; crus: hous, 1966-7; wounde: grunde, 1978-9. This spelling hardly becomes general till the fourteenth century (see Napier, loc. cit.), and the pronunciation is of course always [ū].

NOTES

[NOTES taken from Sir Frederick Madden's edition of 1828 are, as in the original edition of this book, distinguished by the letter M. Notes due to Professor Skeat are also indicated, but the greater part of his work on the text is contained in the foot-notes. Reference is made to articles only when they contain matter of first importance for the text of Havelok, and in the case of any particular emendation the first proposal only is mentioned. In general, parallels are quoted at the first occurrence of a phrase or line, and cross-references are omitted.]

9-10. Cf. ll. 25-6, 87-8, 1970-1, 2894-5.

27. It was, 'there was', the anticipated subject being commonly expressed by it in ME.; cf. ll. 462, 591, 723, 2076, &c.

bi are dawes, 'in former days', ON. dr-dagar.

28. þat in his time, 'in whose time'; for since the ME. relative þat was incapable of inflexion, it was often supplemented by the personal pronoun: þat he = 'who'; þat his = 'whose'; þat him = 'whom'.

29. He dede maken, &c., '(which) he caused to be made-and to be well kept'. The infinitive after don, maken is freely used with a passive value; cf. ll. 38, 41, &c.

31-2. For this enumeration cf. ll. 1327-8, 2183-5, 2194-5, 2260-1, 2465-6.

38. 'And everywhere had them called (to preferment)'.

39. wrobbere 'informers'; see Onions, Med. Æv. x. 159.

44. 'Neither gold nor wealth went for them, i.e. ransomed them'; cf. l. 1430.

55-6. fram : sham. The rime perhaps points to influence of ON. skamm- on ME. shame (OE. scamu), which elsewhere rimes with l. 727 name, l. 1938 lame, and ll. 83, 1191, 1673, &c. blame < O.Fr. blâme.

63-4. blome : rome. Dr. Craigie kindly sends me the following note: 'Read lowerd to Rome. The rime with blome shows that rome cannot be the verb "to roam". To probably means "as far as". The correction of lond to lou'd = lowerd is simple and obvious.' Stratmann, E. S. I. 423, had pointed out that rome = Rome, not roam, but offered no solution. Cf. desqua Rome in this sense, Lai d' Havelok, l. 367.

80-1. A confused construction; were requires he made him; while þat he ne made him would normally follow was.

87-90. Madden compares a passage in Ritson's Metrical Romances, ii. 281:

He was the beste kyng at nede
That ever mihte ride on stede,
Other wepne welde, other folk out-lede;
Of mon ne hede he never drede.

91. A common expression; cf. l. 870.
92. The phrasing in l. 1853 perhaps points to [showe] as the better addition: 'let him see from the deeds of his hand', &c.
98. brede, WS. bræde, 'roast meat'.
115. underfong is a regular analogical form, and in Cursor Mundi, ll. 1519, 1542, has the meaning required here; see Sisam in Archiv, 128. 194 ff.
118. Cf. l. 2542.
123. Cf. ll. 837, 849.
130. 'And do with them (her subjects) what was pleasing to her'. Garnett's emendation for MS. þar. For don him of cf. ll. 953, 2423.
139. See Introduction, p. xxiii.
148. 'Nor any who knew a remedy for his evil'.
149. 'For him there was nothing but death'.
151. Cf. ll. 1248, 2541.
154. The addition should perhaps be [shulde]; cf. l. 209, 'And preide he shulde yeme hire wel', and ll. 2443-4, 244-5. Note the sequences throughout the poem.
160. 'I am very grateful to you'. For kan þank, OE. þanc cunnan, cf. l. 2559.
- 162-3. Cf. ll. 2290-1.
164. gouen hem ille (cf. l. 1129, note). It obviously means 'grieved', but the exact sense of give is doubtful.
175. Perhaps yemen and welde are intransitive, 'govern and rule', and [hir] is unnecessary; cf. yemede intransitive in l. 975.
- 176-7. an-on : Ion. Since Havelok seems to have been composed in the North of England, OE. on ān would possibly have a, not o, in its second element in the original. Hence it is possible to delete the added [Iesu], and read anan : Iohan; and so at l. 1112. Note that in order to make Iohan a monosyllable, the MS. has been altered here and at ll. 1112, 1721, 2563; while in the only other instance, l. 2957, the ordinary elision before hem has to be neglected. The spelling of the MS., with four cases of Iohan against one Ion, is equally decisive for the disyllabic form.
- 190-1. Cf. ll. 2218-9.
199. Cf. l. 1080.
201. Cf. ll. 2311, 2372.
217. Cf. l. 2743.
- 218-19. The transposition suggested by Zupitza, ZfdA. 19. 125, removes all difficulty: 'he made his will very prudently, and straightway carried it out in every particular'; cf. l. 363.
221. i.e. enough to provide his winding-sheet.
222. Cf. l. 2018.
228. In the E. E. T. S. editions, Skeat rightly preferred to take loude as lou'de = louerd(e), but abandoned it here in deference to Holthausen. See Canterbury Tales, A 4287, In manus tuas, lord, to thee I calle, and Skeat's note. The ultimate source is Luke xxiii. 46. See Kölbing in ES. 16. 302.

232-3. For the phrasing cf. ll. 2320-1.

235. drawing bi hor, 'tearing of hair', with ON. hár, as the rime proves.

245-7. For attempts to defend the syntax see Morsbach, ES. 29. 371 f., and Horn, Anglia, 29. 132, who supply his soule as subject of wone. This seems to be the author's intention. Holthausen, following Schmidt, inserts late before wone; cf. l. 406.

255. Cf. ll. 2269, 2853.

256-7. 'To all men he gave what seemed fitting, until the day they died', i.e. for as long as they lived. Holthausen's explanation, that l. 257 contains the same idea as ll. 1405. 2210, seems the best.

277. Literally 'awe stood from him to all England'; cf. Beowulf, 783-4 Norðdenum stod atelic egesa, and New Eng. Dict. s.v. Awe. Al Engeland is properly dative, but when the dative inflexion was lost, it was misunderstood as a nominative. Hence NE. 'all England stood in awe of him'.

279. The rime shows that the vowel is short; hence the word is not OE. gād, but ON. gadd-r as in l. 1016.

300-1. yeue : liue; read the alternative form yiue, and so at ll. 485, 1079, 1109, 1218, 1437.

307. 'Hope often plays tricks on the fool.' For other proverbial phrases cf. ll. 600, 648, 907, 1338, 1352, 1635, 1693, 2036, 2461, 2813, 2983. There is a useful collection of Middle English Proverbs in Skeat's Early English Proverbs, Oxford, 1910.

311. 'So may I have my white neck!' cf. ll. 1743, 2545; and Canterbury Tales, B 4490, So mote I brouke wel myn eyen tweye.

314. Cf. l. 2220.

315. Cf. ll. 466, 419, 2051.

319. also, 'as, like'; OE. alswā yields in ME. also, alse, als, as, which are often used indifferently.

331 ff. 'May Jesus Christ', &c., the subject repeated in l. 223.

349. Cf. l. 1707.

354-5. Morsbach, ME. Grammatik, § 129 b, explains the rime as wulde : fulde < OE. fullian; but Hupe's suggestion (Anglia, 13. 196) wilde : filde is better; cf. Cursor, ll. 18759-60, fulfild : wild; Robert of Brunne's Chronicle, ed. Hearne, i. p. 86, wild : filled, &c.

360-1. beþe : rede, MS. boþe! The form beþe occurs at ll. 694, 1680, always in the bad rime with rede; and therefore it can hardly be from ON. bæði as Björkmann, p. 108, supposes. Otherwise the normal forms bāpe, bōpe, bōpen are used. rēde(n) vb., WS. rēdan, is proved by the rime in ll. 104, 687, 2085. But beside it occur rāpe(n), rōpe(n) from ON. rāða in ll. 1335, 2817. rēd sb., WS. rēd, is proved by rimes in ll. 148, 518, 826, 1194, 1204, 2210, 2871. But the cognate ON. form rād is proved in ll. 75, 2542. Copyists, especially Southern copyists, constantly substitute English for Norse forms, and are then likely to patch the rimes just as has been done in the text; so that bāpe : rāpe would become bape : rede, and then falsely bepe : rede. Hence we need not hesitate to restore the Norse forms wherever they are required, reading bape : rope or bape : rape here and at ll. 693-4, 1680-1; and rape (or rope) in l. 2585. In the present case the change is supported by the Cambridge fragment, bopen : rophen.

375. For frende < ON. frændi, see Glossary.

390. men is singular. OE. man, 'one'.

393. Apparently 'that it may be well pleasing to their kin', which seems unsatisfactory.

395. Although þo his riht, 'those his rights', is a correct form, it is worth noting that the MS. has þo for þou at ll. 388, 1229, 1274; and I should prefer to read þo[u] here.

396-7. For the phrasing cf. ll. 1443-4.

407. Such confused sentences are common, 'God' and 'Christ' being used indifferently; cf. l. 432.

410-11. Holthausen's retention of MS. þe toper, and alteration of eir to broþer, is certainly preferable; cf. ll. 2348-9, 1690-1.

416-17. Cf. ll. 2454-5.

420. The added [ne] is not necessary; cf. the MS. reading in l. 548, and Zupitza in Anglia, I. 468, on the use of ne = 'neither . . . nor'.

421. bebedde is not a known compound, and the form of the prefix would be bi-. Hence be is probably due to repetition of the first letters of bedde. Read bedde, and restore MS. ne. See Stratmann, ES. I. 423-4.

432. ran on blode, 'bled'; it is perhaps possible to retain the MS. reading þat, and, assuming confused syntax, to render '(on) which God himself bled'.

455. Cf. l. 654.

456. On the reading in the text, which involves the minimum of alteration, see Sisam, Archiv, 128. 196.

462-3. 'Alas! is there no corn from which bread could be made?'

464. MS. þs hungreth. The assumption that the AS. þ would be substituted for w in ws = us involves serious difficulties. It would be simpler to suppose, as Dr. Bradley suggests, that the initial þ is miswritten for V = U. And hungreth may be trisyllabic = hungereth.

471-2. Cf. ll. 1413-4.

484. Cf. l. 2172. Hence biddi stands for bede i, an early instance of the confusion of OE. bōdan, 'offer, command', with OE. biddan, 'ask'. So MS. bidde for bede in l. 2548, destroying the rime.

504-6. 'And yet he wished that he were dead, except that he was unwilling to slay him with his own hands, that foul fiend!' Napier's emendation and þouh (cf. MS. in l. 1669) is generally accepted, though it is possible to defend and þouhte. For the repeated nouht many emendations have been suggested, but without regard to the parallel phrasing in ll. 2228-9, which requires the retention of the second nouht. The present reading seems to overcome many difficulties. For but on þat, 'but only that', 'except that', cf. l. 962. Hend here and at ll. 1412, 2069 is the old Norse unlauted plural hend-r.

521. Cf. l. 670.

538. i.e. as long as there was rope to bind with; cf. l. 2437.

544. On the added lines in the Cambridge fragment see Introduction, § 4, and Skeat in MLR. 6, 457.

546-52. The whole passage seems corrupt. It is true that by assuming an elaborate sentence structure, taking old cloth as equivalent to keuel, and giving an unusual meaning to in . . . wounden, something can be made of it (see Emerson, Reader, p. 274). But this is unnatural, and it is simpler to suppose a lacuna, presumably of two whole lines including a main verb; see Zupitza, Anglia, I. 469. At first sight the Cambridge fragment, which has

*He þriste in his muth wel faste

A corner of an old clove, ful hun-wraste, seems to supply the deficiency. But the inclusion of the first line in the text of Havelok breaks the couplet system. The corruption seems to have gone too far to permit of satisfactory emendation.

549. hwere usually taken as = hweþer, but probably 'wherever'. The fragment has Quider so.

560. Holthausen's reading haue [saue] is nearer the MS., and is certainly right; cf. l. 2226.

563. For the phrasing cf. ll. 674, 1225, 2351.

566. Cf. l. 812.

567-8. The emendation is due to Morris.

572. Holthausen and Skeat take him as referring to Grim or Godard. Emerson, Reader, p. 275, refers him to Havelok, who regrets that wild beasts did not carry him off, and save him from the ill-treatment of cruel men. Both are difficult.

591-2. 'From his mouth there issued a ray'. For this idiomatic use of stand cf. Beowulf, ll. 726-7 him of eagum stod . . . leoht unsfæger; and for the whole passage cf. ll. 2122-6.

597. MS. and should rather be restored.

611. For the phrase do ful wo cf. l. 2589.

631. [mi] is not essential.

664. it seems to be the anticipated object in apposition to wey. But it might possibly be the repeated subject 'Grim he'; cf. the MS. reading in l. 2264.

679-80. Skeat compares Handlyng Sinne, ll. 5613-14.

Pers stode and loked on him

Felunlyche, with y3en grym.

680. MS. þoruthlike; for the spelling cf. MS. in l. 2786.

689. Cf. l. 845.

691. 'It seemed to Grim too long until he ran', &c.

693-4. Read raþe : baþe, or rope : boþe; see note on ll. 360-1. MS. liue may be construed as infinitive.

698. wiuēs : OE. wīfes (gen. sg.).

721 ff. Instead of the storm, in the French text Grim's ship is attacked by pirates, who kill the whole of the crew, with the exception of himself and family, whom they spare on the score of his being an old acquaintance.—M.

721-2. Many emendations of the MS. reading have been proposed, but the sense is clear, if loosely expressed.

739. þere for to erde, 'in order to dwell there'.

745. [it] calle : Zupitza's emendation, Anglia, 1. 470 f.

746. Here and in ll. 1331, 1377, 2337, the substitution of þerof for MS. þeroffe entails emendation of the text. Hence it seems that þeroffe is a genuine trisyllabic form. Note the MS. spellings in ll. 372, 466, 2558. Offe is an extended form of of, like onne l. 347 from on.

755. MS. hwel for hel = el, Holthausen's emendation.

761-2. 'One for himself and three others for his sons'.

763-4. fonge : gronge. A bad rime, for g in fonge cannot be palatalized; cf. ll. 855-6 gonge(n) : fonge. As gronge seems fixed by the sense, a French word is to be expected. Holthausen, Archiv, 110. 101, suggests change, 'to exchange'; and it is worth noting that, according to Gaimar, l. 449, Grim lived by exchanging fish for bread : Del peissun cangium le pain.

784. Zupitza's emendation, Anglia, 7. 146 f. It seems agreed that setes = set es, 'set them'; but perhaps the relative is omitted: 'nets (which) he often sets in the sea'.

789-90. MS. hom : grom should remain; cf. OE. æt hām. See Introd. § 20 (3). Hom has few correct rimes.

791-2. Cf. ll. 829-30.

795-6. Read longe : gonge, or lange : gange, and so at ll. 1057-8.

801. þar nouht, 'should not'. But keep MS. þat, construing 'ought not (nouht) to have it (þat) except as the result of (on long) toil'. The explanation of on long is due to J. A. W. Bennett.

808. net < OE. nēat, 'an ox', as the rime shows; cf. ll. 1026, 1891.

819-20. Skeat points out the parallel, Handlyng Sinne, ll. 5811-12:

'Plenerly, alle þat he tok,

Wyth-helde he nat a ferthyng noke'.

See Introduction, § 14. They suggest that [Of] should be omitted.

833-4. Emendations and explanations show that the editors have missed the construction: 'nor any other good (þat douhte) fish with (which) he might feed his household'.

839 ff. In the French, Grim sends Havelok away for quite a different reason, viz. because fishing is not a suitable occupation for him.

855. Read gonge.

863. he was ful wil, 'he was quite at a loss'; cf. l. 1042.

870. MS. on should probably remain in view of parallels like Ysumbras, l. 458 He sprang forthe as sparke one glede.

875-6. brigge: ligge; either OE. brycg, OE. licgan, or the corresponding ON. bryggja, sb., liggja, vb.; ll. 1373-4 þigge: ligge are equally ambiguous.

879. þet oþer day, 'the next day', as in l. 1755.

883-4. bouht: oft. Holthausen alters bouht to coft, participle of coupe, ON. kaupa, 'to buy'. But since the guttural spirant h became f very early in the North, [boft] is a possible pronunciation.

Observe the construction 'the Earl's provisions of Cornwall', where Modern English has the group-genitive 'the Earl of Cornwall's provisions'.

907. 'The food you eat is well invested'; cf. l. 2036 and note, and for the sense l. 1693.

928. Cf. ll. 1997, 2109, 2475.

934. 'He asked nobody to go to meet him', i.e. help him on the return journey with the full pail.

948. For the phrasing cf. ll. 652, 1278.

949-50. It is not necessary to assume a loss of two lines, for the same rime occurs elsewhere, e.g. 2676-7 slawen: rauen; Sir Guy, 3173, haue: plawe, &c. The rime of -u- (< OE. -f-) with -w- seems to occur in good MSS. only when w represents the OE. voiced spirant g, and perhaps indicates a dialectal development parallel to the change of the voiceless spirant h to f; see note to ll. 883-4. Translate 'there was no boy so little for the purpose of sporting and frolicking that he would not play with him'; i.e. Havelok was good-natured enough to play with children too young to make play interesting.

955. stille and bolde, 'shy and bold', a tag; cf. l. 2309.

957. Read sowe, which, from its distribution, can hardly be WS. sāwon. It may be Northern sāgun, or of Scandinavian origin, or an analogical English formation. See Björkmann, p. 87 note.

959. i.e. his fame spread far and wide. For this common idiom cf. Beowulf, l. 18 blæd wide sprong, and for later parallels Hall's note to King Horn, l. 211.

970. donez on, 'put them on'. es (is, ys, as), an unexplained pronoun = 'them', is particularly common in Southern and Eastern texts: cf. l. 1174, and note to l. 784.

987-8. By transposing strong and long, Holthausen obtains no appreciable improvement in sense, and breaks the tag stark and strong, which must remain; cf. ll. 608, 1271, 2535.

997. Kölbing's emendation hore, ES. 19. 146 f., seems inevitable.

1008. blac and brown: a tag characteristic of Havelok; cf. ll. 1909, 2181, 2249, 2694, 2847. The phrase apparently means 'dark and fair', as in the modern surnames, 'Black', 'Brown'. It belongs to a class of tags which cover all sorts of men by the coupling of two adjectives of opposite meaning: arwe and kene, 2115; clad ne naked, 2889; fre and þewe, 262, 2205; heye and lowe, 958, 1324, 2142, 2431, 2471, 2767, 2945; lef and loth, 261, 440, 2313, 2379, 2775; lesse and more, 1013, 2857; lille ond mikle, 2014; long ne lite, 1855; riche and poure, 138, 237, 2471; sibbe and fremde, 2277; stille and bolde, 955, 2309; stronge and wayke, 1012; yunge and olde, 956, 1639, 1933, 2014, 2802.

1019-21. Apparently 'for there was no horse-boy—though they should have (work) in hand—who did not come'.

1037-8. The sense is good, the rime impossible. Kölbing, ES. 19. 147, suggests gradden, which Holthausen accepts, though it destroys the alliteration stoden and stareden, and anticipates the sense of l. 1039. The rime word is probably stadden, pret. plur. < ON. steþja, which, unless some further emendation such as the addition of [on] is admitted, would mean 'to look on'; cf. l. 1041. Compare Cursor Mundi, ll. 204 and 22724, Many man on stad and sey, a reading undoubtedly correct. The Norse word would naturally be eliminated by Southern copyists, as in all but the oldest MS. of Cursor.

1042. 'And was quite ignorant of (the art of) putting'; cf. l. 863.

1051-2. wipe: sife. The rime word, OE. sif-e, rather supports Schmidt's suggestion, p. 51, that wipe is ON. vsða, adv., 'widely', 'far'. But an extended form of wip, prep. gives much better sense. Such extensions are common when the preposition follows the governed word.

1055-6. Sowen: lowen: a false rime since the vowel of sowen must be ō, while lowen < OE. hlōgon has ō. Holthausen reads [f]lowen, 'they fled', which does not fit the sense. Some emendation is needed.

1070. MS. þe speken can be interpreted as 'they talk', since þe for þei is not uncommon. But W. J. B. Owen, Notes and Queries, 25 Oct. 1952, explains convincingly that speken is for speke n. 'report', 'fame', as in l. 1065 above.

1101-2. shop: hok: a poor rime, perhaps due to the rareness of rimes for shop. Cf. ll. 1646-7; and for the phrase, l. 424, which rather points to Zupitza's emendation of l. 1100 (Anglia, 1. 471):

He was [þe] wers[t]e Sathanas.

1103 ff. The French romance differs here very considerably from the English, as may be seen from the summary, Introduction, p. xiii.

1105-6. Read bringen, or ringe.

1112. For the MS. reading, see note to ll. 176-7.

1129. Stratmann, ES. I. 424, points out that the MS. may be read yas, and since f and s are often confused, yaf her ille should stand in the text; cf. l. 164 and note.

1174. 'He gave them to her and she took them'; see note to l. 970.

1177-8. clerk : Yerk. The form Yerk has not been explained.

1183. Read mouhte.

1207-8. Perhaps here read come : nome < OE. cōmon : nōmon; but the neme forms are too common to admit of this as a general explanation.

1211. Cf. l. 2252.

1217. For MS. on lyue read lyue, infin.; see note to ll. 300-1.

1247 ff. The voice of the angel is completely an invention of the English author, and the dream (which is transferred from Argente to Havelok) is altogether different in its detail.—M.

1257. The line is pointless and unnatural. Perhaps read þan, 'when', for þat.

1273. The MS. contains the bad correction shal þu, from shaltu.

1287. Literally 'on one the greatest hill', a not uncommon idiom.

1290. werd = werld with assimilation of trilled rl. The form is particularly common in Northern texts. See Glossary.

1291-2. Read lowe : owe or lawe : awe.

1298. The MS. haue can stand (a) as a spelling for awe; or (b) = have, since such rimes occur elsewhere; see note to ll. 949-50.

1303-4. Hohmann emends the rime by reading yet for ek; cf. ll. 1319-20.

1315. The absence of rime proves corruption or loss, and no satisfactory emendation has been suggested.

1323. sowe, with vowel from the pret. plur.; see note to l. 957.

1329. Cf. l. 2319.

1331-2. doute : noute perhaps points to lengthening of u in open syllables, so that OE. hnūtu > (h)nūte. For the literature on this much disputed point, see Jespersen, Modern English Grammar, i. § 4.212.

1335. Cf. l. 2592, which points to raþe infin. < ON. ráða, not the adverb from OE. hraðe.

1336-8. A very difficult passage. In the text l. 1336 follows Zupitza's emendation, Anglia, I. 471 f.: 'let us both go to Denmark'; but although Zupitza quotes an example from Genesis and Exodus, l. 1775, there are objections to assuming the nominative dual so late, and with the inverted subject we should expect nime not nimen. Holthausen, following Wittenbrinck, p. 11, reads nim me with þe to Denema[r]k raþe; and it may be noted that the MS. has witl for with in l. 1165. Kölbing, ES. 16. 303, proposes nime we swiþe to Denema[r]k baþe, based on l. 2600.

The advantage of Zupitza's reading is that it gives a reason for corruption. Lith has never been satisfactorily explained. l. 1352 shows that the meaning must be something like 'speed', so that Holthausen's hith < OE. hīgð, 'haste', is a good suggestion. The word is not uncommon in ME., and line initials are particularly liable to confusion.

1376. Disyllabic scansion of late allows [me] to be dispensed with.

1377. MS. þat . . . þeroffe, 'whereof', may perhaps stand.

1397-8. name : rauen; cf. ll. 2528-9 grauen : name. Hence the original must have had nauen < ON. nafn, a word otherwise unrecorded in ME. Since the sense was obvious, English scribes substituted the English equivalent, spoiling the rime. See Sisam in Archiv, 128. 196-7.

1401-2. A scribe has substituted shewe for shawe (showe), and then knaue (knowe) has been wrongly altered to make a rime; cf. ll. 1853, 2056; and for the phrasing ll. 2206-7.

1405. i.e. the day he died, for on that day he was both alive and dead; cf. l. 2210 and the note to ll. 256-7.

1431-4. Cf. 2236-9.

1445-1624. The French text helps but little to supply the blank. It shows that Havelok and his wife sailed to Denmark, and, on their arrival, sought out the castle belonging to Sigar, who answers to the Ubbe of the English version [Skeat].

1664. of hire, 'on her account'.

1674. The rime, and the extensive alteration, are objections to quath, and the MS. may be read: Hwanne he hauede his wille yat with Stratmann, ES. 1. 424. Stratmann explains yat as participle of OE. ġēatan, 'to grant', which derives from ON. játa, játta. Translate 'when he (Havelok) had assented to his (Ubbe's) wish'.

1680-1. For the restoration of the rime see note to ll. 360-1.

1698-9. On shewe : lowe see Introduction, § 19.

1720. The MS. has is wimman. It is simpler to read [n]is wimman, deleting [non]; see note to ll. 176-7.

1733. bidde i nouht dwelle; cf. l. 2530.

1734-5. lenge : genge. Since genge is < ON. gengi, lenge is presumably from ON. lengja, not OE. lenġan; and so at l. 2363.

1749. Observe the genitive þe greyues, 'the greave's house'. As the rime shows, greyue is < ON. greiðf, quite distinct from OE. gerēfa. In the French the greyue does not appear in the story.

1763. Fr. chiche has a later form chinche, which a scribe has substituted in the MS. here and at l. 2941, destroying the rime.

1775. big : rig. The word must be ON. hrygg-r, 'back', not OE. hrycg.

1782-3. open : drepen. There is no alternative to open, and dropen cannot be infinitive. Holthausen reads skul be dropen. Hupe's suggestion, Anglia, 13. 199, ich shal [haue] dropen, seems preferable.

1799. Zupitza, Anglia, 7. 150 f., reads nou for you—an improvement. Professor Napier suggests that you[r], = 'of you', would be simpler.

1806. Havelok lifte up, &c. In the French, all the amusing details relative to Robert and Huwe Raven are omitted, and Havelok is made to retire to a monastery, where he defends himself by throwing down the stones on his assailants.—M.

1806-7. Cf. ll. 1968-9.

1819. spende: for the possibility of reading spen, 'vomited', with the MS., see Sisam, Archiv, 128. 197.

1824-5. feld: swerd, a bad rime, which is left isolated by the emendation of l. 2635; but no convincing emendation has been proposed.

1834. bi-halue, 'surround', as the synonyms, l. 1842 vmbyyeden, l. 1875 umbistode indicate. See Genesis and Exodus, l. 3355:

Harde he bi-haluen ðer Moyses.

1853. shewe < OE. scēawian; read showe (shawe) < OE. scedwian, and see note to ll. 1401-2.

1882. cyper unker, 'each of you two'. In early ME. the 1st and 2nd person dual sometimes fall together under the form of the 1st person.

1914-5. 'A curse on him who cares! for they deserved it. What was their business there? They were mauled'. Observe the rime, which shows that werewed is disyllabic, as in l. 1921.

1916. bet, an unusual form of the participle with short vowel as the rime shows. Such weak formations followed the analogy of lēde, lēdde mēte, mētte, &c., where the vowel of the preterite and participle was normally shortened before a double consonant. See note to l. 2338.

1917. The reading gives no sense. Holthausen reads her nes[es], 'their noses', comparing for the meaning ll. 2405-6. Perhaps it is another of the Norse phrases so common in the poem. In Laxdæla Saga, chap. xiii, Melkorka, becoming enraged with Jorunn, setti hnefann á nasar henni.

1930-1. Cf. ll. 2096-7.

1932. Literally 'what this strife has in meaning'. For the phrase as emended by Holthausen (Anglia, Beiblatt, 11. 306), see Genesis and Exodus, ll. 1944, 2727.

1962-3. Read wawe or sowe.

1974. 'had it not been for him'; cf. ll. 2413, 2677.

1976. sinne, 'pity', and so at ll. 2375, 2627.

1983. Here and in l. 2409 the insertion of [him] with Holthausen injures the sense. In the one case the hero Havelok, in the other the traitor Godard is concerned; and the phrases refer to the speaker's or the writer's sympathies, not to the extent of the wounds. Render 'that's a great pity', and cf. ll. 1976, 2006.

2005. keft < ON. keypt-r, partic. of kaupa, 'to buy', ME. coupe(n). See New Eng. Dict. sv. Keft.

2008-9. soth : oth. The rime of soth < OE. sōþ with oth < OE. āþ indicates corruption, despite Kölbing, ES. 16. 301. The extraordinary phrase i ne lepe oth fixes the corruption in the second line. And since soth has remarkably few rime words, I suggest a reading which at first glance seems far-fetched. Read i ne leye [o] [t] oth, 'I do not lie from my teeth'. Cf. Cursor, 13940-1 (Cotton MS.):

Quat sum yee knau wite yee for soth

Sal yee na leis here o mi toth.

The repetition of leye is stylistically good.

2029. þat is naturally dative, as in l. 727: 'to whom the name was'.

2036-7. This line can hardly stand; cf. l. 907. If the original had:

'Wel is set þe mete he etes:'

Quoth Ubbe 'gos, him swiþe fetes'; with two parallel imperatives, then the easy confusion dos for gos would cause fetes to be turned into an infinitive, and the preceding line to be mangled for the sake of the rime. The phrase go fetch is a common one, and the confusion d and g is frequent in MSS.

2045. For MS. Kaym uninflected cf. Cursor, l. 1202 Kaym kin; l. 1114 Caīm dede, &c.

2056. shewed, 'examined', but read the alternative form shawed; cf. note to ll. 1401-2.

2057. knawed must not be altered to knawen, which does not rime. Such weak forms are common in ME.; cf. Cursor, ll. 1162-1, knaud : scaud.

2082. A rof, 'one roof', the unemphatic for the emphatic form of OE. ān.

2092. Aboute the middel, &c. In the French, a person is placed by the seneschal to watch, who first discovers the light.—M.

2106. i.e. 'peeped in through a chink'.

2142-3. Read lowe : sowe, or lawe : sawe.

2143. Read kunmerk (!); cf. l. 604. For the vowel cf. l. 2318 cunne-riche, 2400 kunerike, 2804 kunerike. In the Modern Language Review for January, 1916 (vol. xi, pp. 74 f.), Professor Napier points out that these forms are quite isolated, and therefore cannot be explained as examples of South-western u for y. They are due to analogy of ON. kunung, 'king', the form usual in England.

2150-2. Cf. ll. 2296-8.

2165. blakne would presumably mean 'look black', 'be wroth', but Professor Napier points out that the context would be better suited by the meaning 'turn pale' from blāc, 'white'. See New Eng. Dict. s.v. Bloke, v.

2228-9. Cf. ll. 504-6. The addition [þo] is doubtful, though something is required. Perhaps read he [self]. drop, pret. sing., is difficult to explain, but the vowel is perhaps due to the past participle dropen.

2264. [he] : perhaps MS. it may stand; cf. note to l. 644.

2269-70. Cf. ll. 2853-4, and l. 255.

2282-3. Read -ande : -ande ; or -inde : -inde.

2320. A small h in the margin here is the signal for a coloured initial which the miniator has missed. Hence a new paragraph should begin with [H]wan.

2333. 'how excitement increased'; grim refers to the fury and noise of the bear-baiting, &c. Kölbing, ES. 19. 148, compares Beves MS. A, l. 1880, þus beginneþ grim to growe. In his copy, Professor Skeat notes another example communicated by Dr. Bradley: Castell of Perseverance, l. 226, grym þer schal growe. Cf. also l. 2975, wordes ne grewe.

2338. The MS. reading: I ne wore nouth þeroffe croud is satisfactory (see note to l. 746), except in the last word which must rime with god. Skeat explains, 'I should never be thereby overburdened', taking crod as participle of crūdan, 'to crowd'. Obviously troud, 'believed', which is hardly distinguishable in script, would make excellent sense, were it not for the rime with ð; and inquiry at the Oxford Dictionary for records of short forms elicited a decisive parallel from Robert of Brunne's Chronicle, p. 339.

Blissed be þou God, þat þou in erth cam
Pi word is wele trod, I say it bi William.

The form clearly belongs to trō, l. 2862, Old East Scandinavian trōa, and the shortening is probably an English development parallel to shoe, shod, and in no way connected with modern Scandinavian shortening. Cf. note to l. 1916. A scribe has substituted the corresponding form of troue.

2352. ilker, 'each of them'; OE. ylc heora.

2353. 'by day and night', adverbial genitive singulars, as is shown by the form; OE. gen. sing. dages > dayes, but OE. plur. dagas > dawes usually, as in ll. 27, 2344, 2950.

2355. wel o bon, 'well prepared', 'well equipped'. Dr. Craigie points out to me that the correct explanation of this phrase was first given by Madden in his Lazamon, viz. that it is Old East Scandinavian bœnn, partic. 'prepared', the form corresponding to North-west Scandinavian búinn, which yields ME. boun(d). The rimes here, and in ll. 2571, 2505, 2525, prove the close vowel.

2384 ff. The French story here differs wholly from the English. Instead of the encounter of Robert and Godard, and the cruel punishment inflicted on the latter, in the French is a regular battle between the forces of Havelok and Hodulf (Godard). A single combat takes place between the two leaders, in which Hodulf is slain.—M.

2392. þat . . . he = who; see note to ll. 26-7.

2409. 'That was nothing to grieve about'; see note to l. 1983.

2416. Read fledde.

2432. euerilk fot of hem, 'every one of them'; cf. Katherine, l. 2273, he het . . bihefden ham euch fot; and the phrase 'head of cattle'.

2433. 'whom they flayed' (subsequently).

2441. Literally, 'the bonds were not to seek' (ON. leita), i.e. they were freely used.

2450. went is rather past participle as in l. 2138, than preterite.

2461. Madden, Lazamon, vol. iii. p. 302, quotes De vielz peche novele plaie from Wace [Skeat].

2496. See an ingenious suggestion by Littlehales in Trans. Phil. Soc., 1903-4, p. 161 f. He proposes to read goune for grim; so that goune or gore means 'gown or garment', and refers to the stripping off of the skin as if it were a garment. From the purely linguistic point of view the emendation is a happy one. It removes the only case where the rimes seem to show lengthening of o in open syllables, an assumption the more difficult because the lengthening conditions do not obtain in the nominative gor, 'filth'. The addition of an inorganic e in gore is a further difficulty removed if gore be taken as = OE. gāra.

2519. Here Havelok's journey to England is lost. No doubt a column or a page was dropped by the copyist, or one of his predecessors. The French, with Skeat's rendering, runs:

Quant Haveloc est rois pnssanz,	When Havelok is a mighty king,
Le regne tint plus de .iiii. anz;	He reigned more than four years,
Merueillous tresor i auna.	Marvellous treasure he amassed.
Argentille li comanda	Argentille (Goldborough) bade him
Qu'il passast en Engleterre	Pass into England
Pur son heritage conquerre,	To conquer her heritage,
Dont son oncle l'ont engettée,	Whence her uncle had cast her ont,
[Et] A grant tort desheritée.	And very wrongly disinherited her.
Li rois li dist qu'il fera	The king told her that he would do
Ceo qu'ele li comandera.	That which she will command him.
Sa nanie fet a-turner,	He got ready his fleet,
Ses genz & ses ostz mander.	And sent for his men and his hosts.
En mier se met quant orré a,	He pnts to sea when he has a wind,
Et la reyne od lni mena.	And took the queen with him.
Quatre vinz & quatre cenx	Four score and four hundred (ships)
Out Haneloc, pleines de genz.	Had Havelok, full of men.
Tant ont nagé & siglé,	So far has he steered and sailed
Q'en Carleflure est ariué.	That he has arrived at Carleflure.
Sur le hanene se herbergerent,	Hard by the haven they abode,
Par le pais viande quierent.	And sought food in the country round.
Puis enuoia li noble rois,	Then sent the noble king,
Par le consail de ses Danois,	By the advice of his Danes,
A Alsi qu'il li rendist	To Alsi (Godrich)—that he should restore to him

La terre qe tint Ekenbright,	The land that Ekenbright (Athelwold) held,
Q'a sa niece fut donée,	Which was given to his niece,
Dont il l'out desheritée;	And of which he had deprived her.
Et, si rendre n'el voleit,	And, if he would not give it up,
Mande qu'il le purchaceroit.	He sends word that he will take it.

The remainder of the French poem altogether differs in its detail from the English.

2521-3. If the poet had an actual priory in mind, it was probably Grimsby (or Wellow) Abbey, a house of Black (Austin) Canons. Madden thought rather of the Austin Friary founded at Grimsby in 1280 (1) (see Introd. § 14); but a story-teller would hardly strain the credulity of his audience by such a distortion of an event within their own memory. Grimsby Abbey was dedicated to St. Olaf.

2526-7. oth : wot. The MS. spelling oth : woth and the false rime show that oth is not, as has hitherto been supposed, the word 'oath', but stands for ot = (h)ŕt < OE. hāt, 'a promise'.

2528-9. grauen : name; see note to ll. 1397-8.

2548. On MS. bidde for bede see note to l. 484.

2557. MS. ye ðeþer, with þe dotted for erasure. Holthausen reads gryþed, 'made ready', but neither emendation is convincing. Perhaps read þe bere or he bere, '(which) they bore'.

2563. For the MS. reading see note to ll. 176-7.

2567. [at]-sat; cf. l. 2200; but MS. sat, 'opposed', is correct.

2582-3. Holthausen transposes these lines, with some gain; cf. ll. 41-2.

2584-5. Read boþe : roþe; see note to ll. 360-1.

2588. The MS. reading can stand, but perhaps slo is miswritten for flo, 'flay'; cf. l. 612. The phrase with flo is very common, and slawen for flawen occurs in the MS. at l. 2476, owing to the likeness in form of f and s; cf. MS. in ll. 1427 yis; 2289 þhes; 2442 fo.

2634-5. feld : sword. The cutting off of the left arm with the shield it bears is often referred to in the Romances, e.g. Roland and Vernagu, ll. 823-4:

þe left arm and þe scheld
Fel forþ into þe feld. (Kölbing, ES. 16. 302.)

Hence Madden's suggestion with þe scheld for with þe sword can hardly be denied.

2658-9. boþen : drowen. The rime is false both in consonant and vowel, for boþen has þ, drowen ð. But the sense is much superior to that given by Holthausen's reading [he] lowen, 'they laughed', for boþen. Some emendation is necessary, but none so far proposed seems satisfactory.

2676-7. slawen : Rauen; see note to ll. 949-50.

2687. hul, 'hollow', in the MS. altered from hill. The vowel a seems to be proved by the rime. The form hule occurs in Morris, OE Misc., p. 8, l. 253. It is perhaps O. East Norse hul.

2688. tarst = to arst according to Kölbing, ES. 16. 303, but New Eng. Dict. sv. erst, prefers the explanation in the foot-note, since the form to erst seems unknown. But in view of the difficulty of explaining loss of a-, it would perhaps be better to read [a]t arst.

2690. In support of the emendation of leuin, 'lightning', to leun, note that in the Lai d'Havelok Hodulf and Havelok attack each other come leon (l. 960).

2691. neuere kines : a curious phrase for none kines.

2698. felden (MS. feldem), a weak preterite form of fall. See New Eng. Dict. On the rime gyes : is, see Intro. p. xxix.

2700-1. brittene : littene, infinitives, the first < OE. brytnian, the second probably a new formation which would correspond to OE. lytnian*, 'to lessen'.

2719. Zupitza, Anglia, 7. 155, suggests þi dede, and Professor Skeat would also read þi wrathe. Holthausen prefers mi deole, 'my sorrow'.

2766. þan, 'when'.

2783. for hem, 'before them', as in l. 2947 for his barnage.

2784. shawe in its early meaning, synonymous with se.

2880. No addition is needed. For the idiom see Glossary.

2933. From the appearance of part of l. 2954 after l. 2933, Zupitza, Anglia, 7. 155, suggested that the scribe was copying from a MS. with twenty lines to the page; and slipped a page. The MS. shows that l. 2953 was also copied here, and then altered to l. 2933.

2936. Read baþe, since rathe is < OE. hrǣþe.

2944. [alle] is not necessary, for corune is naturally trisyllabic as in l. 1319.

2944-5. Read sawe : lawe, or sowe : lowe.

2956-7. anon : Iohan; see note to ll. 176-7.

2960. gete, 'watch' < ON. gæta, as in l. 2762.

2966. þat . . . hem bitwene = 'between whom'; see note to ll. 26-7.

2970. oþer, MS. oþe. Perhaps read owe[r], 'anywhere', for OE. þ and p are confused in the MS. See a similar case in Cursor (Cotton MS.), l. 11544. But oþer . . . ne, 'either . . . or', is grammatically sound.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

The Glossary is now adapted to the normalized text; but interesting MS. forms are indicated, and the references, taken in conjunction with the foot-notes, provide a full index to the spellings. In the Text the commonest fluctuations in form or spelling are ā:ō (p. xxix); an:on; i:y; u:o (p. xl); u:ou (p. xl); u:w (p. xxxix); ei:ey:ai:ay; c:k; hw:qu (p. xl); sch:sh; th:þ; and cross references are not always given. Many words and phrases are now added, which, though easily intelligible, are worth recording in a text so early; and except in references, completeness is aimed at. Except for special reasons, only verb tense forms are parsed, because the inflexion of nouns and adjectives presents no difficulty. Brief etymological indications are added, with references in difficult cases to the Oxford English Dictionary (N.E.D.).
